

OH! BE NOT THE FIRST.
Oh! be not the first to discover.
A blot on the fame of a friend.
A flaw in the faith of a lover,
Whose heart may prove true in the end.

We none of us know one another,
And oft into error we fall;
Then let us speak well of our brother,
Or speak not about him at all.

A smile or a sigh may awaken
Suspicion most false and undue,
And thus our belief may be shaken
In hearts that are honest and true.

How often the light smile of gladness
Is worn by a friend that we meet
To cover a soul full of sadness,
Too proud to acknowledge defeat.

How often the sigh of dejection
Is heaved from the hypocrite's breast,
To parody truth or affection,
Or to lull a suspicion to rest.

How often the friends we hold dearest
Their noblest emotions conceal,
And become the purest, sincerest,
Have secrets they cannot reveal.

Leave base minds to harbor suspicion,
And small souls to trace out defects—
Let ours be a nobler ambition,
For base is the mind that suspects.

We none of us know one another,
And oft into error we fall;
Then let us speak well of our brother,
Or speak not about him at all.

History of the Plow.
The first plow is supposed to have been the rude branch of a tree cut so as to have a cleft end the point of which, dragged along the surface of the ground, scraped a furrow into which seeds were thrown.

It soon occurred to the husbandman, that he might relieve his own labor by yoking an animal to the long arm of the primitive instrument, then arose the necessity for a handle, affixed to the back, so that the plow might be guided. The strength of the animal soon wore away or broke the cleft of the branch, and this necessity gave rise to the invention of means for attaching movable shares first of wood and next of stone, copper, or iron, worked to a shape adapted to the cutting of furrows, so as to avoid the excessive labor arising from the plowman's having to lean with all his weight upon the plow, to press it into the earth.

Just such an implement as these conjectures indicated was used by the Saxons.

Some of the facts connected with the history of the plow are almost incredible. In Ireland there once prevailed a custom of "plowing with the horse's tail." The draught pole was lashed to the tail of the horse, which he did by walking backwards before the miserable animal, and beating it on the head on either side, according to the direction required.

This custom prevailed for a considerable time; in spite of a law which was passed in the early part of the seventeenth century, imposing severe penalties upon persons guilty of "plowing by the horse's tail," as in the act mentioned and described.

From the Rev. Caesar Otway's "Sketches in Erris and Tyrarley," it appears that the barbarous practice lingered in the remote west of Ireland as late in the year 1740.

And from a paper "On the breed of horses in Scotland in the ancient times," printed in the first volume of the "Transactions of the society of Antiquaries of Scotland," we find that the same custom was practiced in that country, as late as the year 1792.—[Southern Homestead.

A PRINTER'S TOAST!—The printer, the master of trade. He beats the farmer with his fist "Hoe," the carpenter with his rule; the mason in setting tall columns, he surpasses the doctor and lawyer in tending to cases, and beats the parson in management of the devil.

A PROVERB OF SOLEMN'UN!—It is better that a woman should scold than do worse. Better for us to endure the present ill than fly to others that we know not of. We do not relish the noise of scolding. We never did. Scolding seems to be a poor use to make of a woman. But then, scolding may have its advantages. We do not like the noise of a boiler, blowing off steam; but if it saves the boiler from bursting, we should be content to endure it.

Mother, don't you wish you had the tree of evil in our garden? Why, Joe, what do you mean? As money is the root of all evil, if we had the tree, couldn't we get all the precious stuff? You're getting too smart, that's what comes of sending boys to the macademics.

KINDS WORDS—USE THEM.—Because they fall pleasantly on the ears of all to whom they are addressed, and it is therefore one of the ways of promoting human happiness. Because they give an impression in your favor, and thus prepare the way for your greater influence over others for good.
